OrderWork Service Partner Collects Achievement Award from Whitehall

One of OrderWork's 1,800 Service Partners, Walter Law from WL Computers in Glasgow has won a national award for Enterprise in Scotland.

Based in Glasgow, Walter first won his local heat, before picking up the national prize of "Enterprising Student 2009" and has been invited to Whitehall next month to be officially recognised for his achievement.

Following a recent change of career, Walter re-trained at college to become a Microsoft certified engineer. Following this, Walter signed up onto the OrderWork network to become an approved Service Partner and has since gone on to complete work for John Lewis in Glasgow. Walter directly attributes OrderWork as the ingredient to his success.

"OrderWork makes it possible for local, small businesses to work with large high street retailers. I have been able to grow my business, and have even taken on another employee, something I would never have dreamed of," Walter said.

OrderWork's Managing Director, Tom Bausemer commented "The success of WL Computers goes to prove that OrderWork places local jobs with local businesses. We are very proud to be able to match up small, customer focused organizations such as WL Computers – with our stable of high street retailer client base to provide an excellent installation service to UK consumers nationwide. I congratulate Walter on his fantastic achievement in winning the Enterprising Student 2009 national prize".
